Friends for Life

The concept that trained dogs could act as eyes for those who could not see developed at the beginning of the twentieth century in Germany in an unusual school. The pupils were not humans. They were dogs who learned how to lead people who were blind. The idea caught on quickly. Guide dogs, or Seeing Eye dogs as they are also known, began to be trained in many countries. They are now a familiar sight. These patient and loyal animals lead their blind companions everywhere they go. They enable their owners to make their way in the world almost as well as sighted persons.

Not every breed of dog makes a good guide. Seeing Eye dogs must be alert at all times, so dogs that are easily distracted are not suitable. Labrador retrievers, German shepherds, and boxers make excellent guides. They are smart, easy to train, and usually get along well with people. During its training, the dog is taken to many kinds of busy places. This is to get it accustomed to anything that might happen. A dog is trained in large stores, noisy airports, and crowded restaurants. It rides on buses and in taxis. It is pushed and poked. It learns to ignore anything that might cause its attention to wander.

The Seeing Eye dog is responsible for steering its owner carefully past any obstacles. On busy sidewalks, the dog must skillfully weave its way around other pedestrians. This is to make sure its owner doesn't get jostled. A guide dog is trained to come to a stop just before it reaches a curb; this is the way it tells its owner to take a step up or down. A guide dog learns to be obedient, of course. But it is also taught that sometimes it must disobey. Say its owner tells it to cross a street when a car is coming. It won't budge until it is safe to cross. While it is being trained, a guide dog is never punished for making a mistake; instead it is encouraged to do better by being rewarded with praise.

When the training is complete, a guide dog is assigned to its new owner. The two of them need to be compatible; they will be together for a long time. The size, weight, and nature of both are taken into account. A burly person might be more comfortable with a large dog. A person who spends most of the day inside probably will not want to be matched with a frisky dog that needs plenty of exercise. From the beginning, a strong bond needs to form between the dog and the owner.

The Seeing Eye headquarters are in Morristown, New Jersey. The Seeing Eye is the oldest school for guide dogs in the United States. Every year several hundred blind people spend a month there. They learn how to work with the dogs they have been matched with. Usually a guide dog stays with its owner for about ten years before it retires. Then it may go to live with friends of the owner. The dog might stay with them as an ordinary family pet for the rest of its life.

FUN & FASCINATING FACTS

• Alert comes from the Italian all'erta, which at one time meant "acting as a lookout on a watchtower." The person in the watchtower had to be alert (adjective, meaning "watchful"); the person would alert the others in the event of danger (verb, meaning "to warn") by sounding the alert (noun, meaning "warning signal"). To be on the alert means "to be watchful and ready."

• If you live with or travel with a companion, you will probably eat your meals together. This was the case with the Romans, too.

The word comes from the Latin prefix com-, which means "with," and the word panis, which is Latin for "bread." To the Romans, a companion was a person with whom one shared a meal, of which bread was one of the main items.

• A pedestrian is a person who gets around on foot. A pedal is a lever operated by the foot. A quadruped is a creature with four feet, while a centipede supposedly has 100 feet (it actually has about seventy). All of these words come from the Latin ped-, whose meaning you can probably guess.
